Hi Sarah,

I'm sending over the NDA I received from Spray Products along with a version that highlights my recommended revision in a few areas. I think the sooner we get that squared away the better if we decide to move forward with them. There is also a prefilled PDF version as well where I inserted the information in the highlighted areas. SprayProducts looks like one of the strongest options and are quite confident they can deliver.

It's been a busy week—had several good meetings pop up last minute, with a lot of contacts just reaching out by phone. Today I met with Yannis from the Imperial College of London (sounds important) at 12:30, which was a solid discussion. The main takeaway from him (and most of the schools I've/we've talked with) is that they're more interested in the testing phases or in helping refine a baseline formulation to get the desired effect. That may be a strong option for us down the line when we hit that phase.

Right now, I've narrowed this down to two clear COAs, which I'll walk through with you on Friday. I'll send the PowerPoint ahead of time so you have it for review.

Thanks as always for your input and guidance—your thoughts on the NDA will be really helpful.

Very respectfully,

Jacob Bevier
